A Series of Articles on Trade in China Based on Twenty-seven years' Experience.

CHINA IMPORT TRADE

THE China Import Trade may be divided into five sections: (1) Textiles (2) Metals (3) Machinery and Industrial Equipment (4) Chemicals (5) Miscellaneous Sundry Goods. The last statistical figures for 1921 show the China Import Trade value to be 906 million Haikwan Taels, an increase of 144 millions Taels over the previous year.

The Textile Trade of China is probably the greatest in volume and constitutes China's chief Import. Great Britain being the main supplier of Cotton and Woolen Goods. Japan is second and has quite a share of the Cotton trade, and the U.S.A comes as a poor third, though up to 1913 American Textiles received a lot of attention. The main lines of Cottons are Shirtings, Sheetings, Drills, Jeans T. Cloths, Cambrics, Lawns Muslins, Plain and Printed Cottons, Dyed Italians, Venetians and Lastings, Spanish Stripes, Flannelettes, Cotton Blankets, Handkerchiefs, Towels, Yarn and Thread.

The main Woolen lines are Blankets and Rugs, Broadcloth Camlet and Bunting, Lastings Long Ells, Spanish Stripes Woolen Suitings and Overcoatings and Woolen Yarn and Cord.

The Textile business is highly specialised in China, both by Foreign and Chinese firms and the volume of business runs into huge figures. The trade is principally in the hands of British firms who represent Lancashire manufacturers. In the Exchange Slump of 1920 it was the tremendous amount of business booked in Textiles, uncovered by exchange by either the native buyers or the foreign firms, which caused the greatest havoc and demoralisation of business, the effect of which is still felt in these depressing times.

Metals and Minerals constitute about one-third of China's Imports and are imported either in Ingot or manufactured form. Old metals and scrap iron are big lines in themselves. Copper ingots are largely imported for minting purposes and for use in the Arsenals. The Mints are controlled by the Tuchuns who derive a nice graft income from this source. Tin slabs, pig lead and spelter are also important items imported in ingot form. Lead is essentially used for lining Tea Chests. Tin for Joss Foil and Spelter for minting other purposes.

Under the heading of manufactured steel products are mild steel bars and shapes such as angles, tees, etc. Tinplates, Galvanised Sheets and Wire, Stove Sheets, Mild Steel Hoops and Sheets, Bamboo steel, Steel Tubes etc. The uses to which these metals are put in the Orient are identical with those of the Occident, and standard specifications and gauges are recognised by the China Trade with few exceptions. These are peculiar local customs established by precedents.

In this connection one peculiar feature may be mentioned. About 20 years ago Mild Steel was little known to the Chinese and was not imported in any appreciable quantities. Iron was essentially used by the Chinese, who, however, in discovering that Mild Steel was more pliant and easier to work than iron, gradually switched from Iron to Mild Steel, the former metal being practically discarded except for certain special requirements. The local name of "Iron" was however not discarded and even today when a Chinese dealer is in the market he calls for "Iron" bars or "Iron" angles etc.

This has let to some serious losses to newcomers in the Import Trade in China for the dealer having ordered "Iron" Bars or "Iron" angles promptly rejected these goods on arrival because they were "Iron" instead of Mild Steel. This happened quite often during the war years when literally hundreds of new firms opened up in China and dabbled in metals and other lines that they were not experienced in. The term "Iron" now, by local custom and usage is in the trade known to be mild steel. China is an exceptional buyer of old metals such as galvanised wire shorts, hoop cuttings, bar ends, plate cuttings, old horse shoes etc. Wire shorts are used for bunding purposes, hoop cuttings for making the rims of wheels of rickshaws and other small vehicles. Defective wire rods are used in connection with concrete floorings, and plate cuttings are employed in the manufacture of choppers, second grade knives and scissors. Old horse shoes give the Chinese farmers sickles and razors as well as various types of small tools. The metal trade in China is a tricky one, as the dealers are a very "savvy" lot of old birds, but once you have their confidence and respect it is an easy matter to deal with them. The pitfalls are not many if an experienced man is handling the

France's Representative At Harding's Funeral

Gen H.J.E. Gouraud

WHEN the Germans launched their offensive of July 14, 1918, with which they hoped to win the war, General H. J. E. Gouraud, who had lost his arm in the Gallipoli Peninsula, commanded a French army in the Champagne defensive sector, in France, to which was attached the Forty-second American (Rainbow) Division. General Gouraud's intelligence service knew the exact second of the assault, and he had ordered his infantry to fall back, so that his artillery could wipe out the German attackers. The French fell back, as ordered, but the "fightin' fools" of the Forty-second Division forgot how to retreat. Instead, they met the Germans half way and smeared their attack all over the face of France. "Boys, you've ruined my plans of battle!" General Gouraud told their officers, as, with tears in his eyes, he thanked them for their "sublime insubordination." He rushed to General Foch and demanded that more Americans be permanent to the fighting line. He was so insistent, Foch threw in other American divisions, and the war ended. Gouraud is now in the U. S. as the guest of his Rainbow Division and will be France's official representative at President Harding's funeral.

The services, through the kindness of Dean Symons of Holy Trinity will be held in Shanghai's central landmark at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, at the same time, owing to the difference in time, that President Harding's body is lying in state in the East Room of the White House in Washington.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

BY J. L. BUTTS

Aroused by unusual sounds at 4:30 a.m., Lieu Dong-chi went downstairs and found the front door open and Wong Yao-ching, a complete stranger, in the house. The freshness of their acquaintance didn't prevent Lieu from being very informal with Wong and after they had understood each other thoroughly Lieu took Wong out and introduced him to a policeman, who treated him even more informally than had the householder.

Wong and Lieu next met at the Mixed Court and Lieu told the Magistrate about the meeting. The Court asked Wong what he was doing in Lieu's home at 4:30 in the morning.

"I was on my way to the railway station," said Wong.

The Court thought the prisoner must be hard of hearing, so the question was repeated, with variations; but Wong came back with the same answer.

This casual party will continue to miss trains for two months and will then take a trip to the frontier.

WAUNG IS PERPLEXED

Madame Woo Lok-sz was proceeding along Fokien Road the other day, resplendent in her afternoon frock and wearing her holiday ornaments, when she felt a twitch at her coiffure and reached up to find that one of her pearl-studded hairpins was gone. Turning round she saw a man loping down the street, so she lifted a warwhoop and took up the trail. A Sikh Constable caught the yodel and, seeing the fleeting Chinese, gave chase. The pursuit ran through half a dozen alleyways—so the Sikh told the Mixed Court Magistrate next day—and wound up with the policeman straddling Waung Ah-loong and extracting the hairpin from his fist.

"It's a consarned (or such-and-such) libel!" protested Waung. "I was in a watch shop buying a timepiece when I thought I heard a police whistle blow. So I went outside and I saw a man running and I thought to myself there must be a fire somewhere, and I followed him and the first thing I knew there was a policeman sitting across my neck and he said I'd stolen a gold hair ornament that he said he'd taken out of my hand. That's all I know about it. I must have grabbed the pin when I fell."

Waung has six months to ransack his memory for other theories.

SPEAKING OF A DOG'S LIFE—

In the course of the day's work it became incumbent upon Tseu Vung-sung to transport a cat from one house to another. He decided that it was too far to walk and so mounted his bicycle. Now, no man can ride a bike down a Shanghai street with a cat under either of his arms and Tseu got round the difficulty by fastening one end of a cord to the handlebars and the other end to the animal's neck. The cat had just about lost all interest in its journey when a police constable happened into the line of march; by reason of which interruption the S.S.P.C.A. was enriched to the amount of $2, Tseu being out a like amount.

Dent And Company Failed For Over Taels 700,000, Bankruptcy Case Shows

Old Shanghai Firm Has Assets Of Only $30,000—Failure Due To Chaos In China, Ruhr Situation And Defaulting Chinese Customers

Liabilities amounting to seven lakhs of taels and assets of approximately Tls. 30,000 were shown when the hearing of the public examination in the bankruptcy proceedings of Mr. R. V. Dent, trading under the name of Dent and Company, was called before Sir Skinner Turner in the British Supreme Court yesterday.

Mr. Dent was questioned for a considerable time by Mr. Cook, the Official Receiver. He stated that he lived at the residence of his father in Rue du Roi Albert. His business was that of general merchants, and was originally started in June, 1914, under the style of A. Arnaud-Coste and R. V. Dent.

The Official Receiver—What capital did you start with?

Mr. Dent—My partner put in Tls. 7,000 and I put in Tls. 20,000. I borrowed my amount from my father; my partner borrowed his from Chinese friends.

The whole of your capital was Tls. 27,000?—Yes.

Have you personally and at all times superintended the business?—Yes, except for a period when I was away from Shanghai.

While you were absent from Shanghai, to whom did you delegate the superintending of the business?—My partner.

Were you satisfied with the result while you were away?—No, I considered my partner had acted without consulting me.

You mean to say you were thoroughly dissatisfied with the state of affairs when you came back?—I was absolutely dissatisfied.

Mr. Dent went on to state that he was absent, travelling, from August 24, 1919, till April 25, 1920. During this period his firm incurred no losses.

The Official Receiver—Then why were you so dissatisfied?

Mr. Dent—Because I considered he had exceeded all the arrangements between him and me as to the volume of trade. My idea of the piece goods business was not more than £50,000. As soon as I had gone he disregarded the figure which I had mentioned.

Financial difficulties, added the witness, came later and the partnership was dissolved, the name of the firm being changed to Dent and Co. Witness thought it was better for only one man to have charge of the business, and his friends, the [illegible], and also his [illegible] in the matter. His partner had insisted on going on with the Canton branch, which witness opposed and wished to close down. Also witness wished to avoid any possibility of his partner declaring a regiement transactionale, which witness considered was against his creditors' interests.

BANK'S PERMISSION

Witness approached the bank and obtained permission to carry on, and he took over the firm in February last year. The arrangement with his partner was that the latter was not to interfere in any way with the working of the business.

The official receiver—You were at that time under large liabilities?

Mr. Dent—Yes, just about the same as they are now.

Witness had never been individually, or as a member of the firm, been bankrupt before.

Have you made any assignment for the benefit of your creditors?—I have given security to my bankers. I have made no assignments.

What securities did you hand over, and when?—I handed over my securities on the foundation of the firm. We just deposited them with the bank and we deposited them on various occasions subsequently. After the founding of the firm we did very well, but when bad times came along I had to go to the bank for assistance. This was in July, August and September, 1920, when we put up all our resources possible, and we did not come to the end of those resources till July, 1921.

Did you get any advances after that?—Yes.

Against what security?—No security.

The bank did not ask for any security at all?—No security.

How long did that go on?—Right up till now. The bank stopped any more advances on June 4 of this year.

You made no assignment, in a legal form, to the bank?—No.

The security you refer to: does that refer to goods?—Yes, import and export cargo. Every month we gave the bank a list of securities.

The Official Receiver—I understand there was one assignment made?

Mr. Dent—Yes, a life insurance policy.

£25,000 LIFE INSURANCE

To whom?—The Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. That was on their request—a £25,000 life policy.

Did you have an advance after that?—Not on my policy, they

STEIN ARRESTED SECOND TIME IN ARMS CASE

Alleged Gun-Runner To Be In Court This Morning

Carrol V. Stein, publisher of "Shanghai Sports" and an 'advisor' to Chang Tso-lin, the warlord of Mancharia on military matters, was re-arrested by U. S. Marshal Thurston Porter and Sub-Inspector Yerke of the Municipal Police yesterday on charges connected with the previous allegations of the importation and sale of arms and ammunition in violation of the treaties between the United States and China of 1844 and 1858.

Stein will be brought before U. S. Commissioner Nelson E. Lurton at 10 o'clock this morning when bail will be set.

Stein was originally arrested in Mukden, where he was supposedly serving General Chang as an Advisor, upon a warrant sworn out by U. S. District Attorney Leonard Husar and executed by the Acting American Consul-General at Mukden. He was brought to Shanghai and released on G.$1,000 bail, which he put up through his attorney, Mr. F. J. Schuhl. No date was set for his preliminary hearing pending the return of Mr. Husar, and his own attorney, Mr. Schuhl, from the North, where they are now attending the United States Court sessions.

Yesterday Commissioner Lurton swore out the second warrant for Stein's arrest and he was immediately taken into custody. It is not expected that he will be able to produce the additional bail that will be demanded by the Government and consequently will be held in custody pending the preliminary hearing.

REPORT TYPHOON NEARS THE COAST IN WENCHOW AREA

The typhoon threatening the coast had arrived near Wenchow last evening, according to a notification issued by Siccawei Observatory at 9 o'clock last night. Wenchow is about 140 miles South of Ningpo.

The storm might incline to the northwest, the bulletin stated, threatening the stations of the Yangtsze and passing to the west of Shanghai.

Very fierce squalls were reported for the eastern quadrant, with rough weather prevailing between the north of the Formosa Strait and the mouth of the Yangtsze.

Only two vessels scheduled to sail from Shanghai yesterday were reported as held up by the weather outside. These were the Shanghai Maru, of the N.Y.K. Shanghai-Nagasaki express line, and the B. and S. steamer Kanchow, for Swatow, Hongkong and Canton. Both ships left port yesterday morning and were held up at Woosung an account of the typhoon.

MCKENNA MAY NOT TAKE JOB AS TREASURY CHIEF

Several Factors Combine To Make Acceptance Unlikely

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 6.—Although no official announcement has been made it is generally understood that Mr. Reginald McKenna will not assume the Chancellorship of the Exchequer, which he provisionally accepted in May.

Various reasons are assigned for his refusal, among others, his disapproval of the Government's handling of the Ruhr situation and its financial policy, and also the anti-McKenna feeling among Tory Members of the House of Commons.

A hitch has also arisen in connection with obtaining a seat in the House. Neither of the sitting Members for the City of London, which Mr. McKenna specially desires to represent, is willing to create a vacancy in spite of tempting offers of peerages and Ministerial office.

FILIPINOS TO RENEW FIGHT FOR INDEPENDENCE

Plan New Campaign To Reach President Coolidge

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Manila, [illegible]—Filipino politicians are expected to renew their fight for the independence of the islands as soon as President Harding is buried in Marion.

Little is known of the attitude of President Coolidge toward the independence idea and considerable discussion has manifested itself among the Filipino leaders. Some hold the opinion that President Coolidge will not back up General Wood to the extent that President Harding did, while others are confident that the American policy in the islands will remain unchanged as Coolidge, they assert, holds identical ideas to the late President concerning the administration of the insular government.

Plans for an independence commission to go to the United States will very probably be carried out as first planned now as a test of Coolidge's stand on the question of independence.

Judge Juan Sumulong has accepted the Democrata nomination for Senator from the Fourth Senatorial District which includes Manila, opposing Quezon's candidate, ex-Mayor Roman Fernandez. Governor Martinola, president of the Democrata party, in announcing Sumulong's acceptance, said that Judge Sumulong would not back General Wood in the present fight between the Administration and the politicos headed by Senate President Quezon, but that he was opposed to making the fight an issue at the polls.

Despite Judge Sumulong's desire, however, the issue will be the leading argument for or against any of the candidates when the elections open and will be a test of the relative strength of Wood and Quezon in Manila and the surrounding district.

(Special To The China Press)

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Black-draped airplanes which flew over the special funeral train bearing the remains of President Harding, beloved Chief Executive of a mourning nation, and dropped thousands of flowers escorted the train into Chicago today.

The sombre machines flew several hundred miles to meet the train and escorted it along the Chicago Northwestern railroad tracks leading into the city under a bombardment of flowers and wreaths.

Thousands of mourning friends met the train at the Northwestern station here, silent and with bared heads.

New York is literally buried in crepe. Every public and private building on the principal streets of the city are dressed in mourning from the ground to the utmost pinnacle of the highest skyscrapers and millions of flags throughout the city are at half-mast, as are the flags of the entire nation.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, Aug. 7.—President Harding's body will arrive here this afternoon, and according to announcement made by President Coolidge this morning, will be met at the railway station by the President, members of the Cabinet, members of the Supreme Court several Senators and Congressmen and other high government officials, and a military and naval escort.

The body will be escorted by a squadron of cavalry, a battalion of field artillery, a battalion of marines, and a detachment of sailors.

The body will be taken immediately to the East Room in the White House where it will lie in state until Thursday morning, when it will be transferred to the Capitol Rotunda to remain until 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It will then be transferred to the railway station where a special train will convey the funeral party to Marion.

(BY UNITED PRESS)
Special to The China Press

Washington, Aug. 7.—Realising the grave importance of problems confronting the United States at a time when the nation's leader has been struck down by death President Coolidge is holding conferences of Republican leaders and close friends of his own and of the dead President mapping out the Administration policy.

President Coolidge is faced with the task of carrying on the work of settling the threatened anthracite coal strike where President Harding left off when he was summoned by death, and also with dealing with the extremely bad situation growing out of the severe drop in the price of wheat and the consequent dismay among American farmers. It is expected that the American policy with regard to the Ruhr will remain unchanged.

President Coolidge is expected to make an official announcement concerning the Administration's plans and aims shortly after the funeral.

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The special funeral train arrived in Chicago this afternoon. Crowds, estimated at 100,000 thronged the railroad yards. The Company was compelled to abandon the movements of suburban trains.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Hongkong, Aug. 7.—Dr. Sun Yat-sen has sent his condolences to President Calvin Coolidge and has assured him of the traditional friendship between the American and Chinese peoples.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Aug. 6.—It is officially confirmed that General Gouraud will represent France as Ambassador Extraordinary at the funeral of President Harding.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Mr. George Harding, brother of the late President, and Mr. W. H. Findley, president of the Chicago Northwestern Railway, met the special train carrying the remains of the President on a special train just over the Illinois border. They boarded the funeral train there for the trip to Washington. Mr. Harding was greatly touched when he went into Mrs. Harding's compartment and they remained alone discussing their bereavement for over an hour.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, Aug. 7.—President Coolidge apparently has no intention of calling a special session of Congress to consider administration measures as a result of the death of President Harding although he has not definitely made up his mind on the question as yet. He held a conference today with Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who is actively interested in calling a special session.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

On Board Funeral Train, Cedar Rapids, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Harding rested well last night and was feeling well enough today to converse with several women members of the party, mostly about her dead husband.

Everyone on board the funeral train is greatly touched with the silent tribute to the dead President that has been paid by citizens everywhere along the Chicago Northwestern line, over which the train is now travelling. Even farmers in the fields stop work as the train passes and bow their uncovered heads. Expressions of sympathy are received at every station at which the train stops.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, Aug. 7.—It has been announced that the funeral services for President Harding will be held at Marion at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, Aug. 6.—A close friend of President Coolidge's says that Mrs. Coolidge is one of the best cooks in New England. When the Coolidge's move into the White House he predicted that she would once more resume her shopping and would also very probably cook some of the President's favorite dishes. Mrs. Coolidge is a tall, graceful woman with black hair, blue eyes and pleasing personality.

(Reuter's Service)

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The special train bearing the body of the dead President has crossed the Mississippi, thus completing the Western portion of its journey.

The States through which the train passed vied with one another in honoring the late President, notably Iowa where work ceased and thousands stood silently beside the permanent way.

President Harding's aged father today joined the train.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Manila, Aug. 7.—In proclaiming Friday Memorial Service Day for President Harding, Governor-General Leonard Wood, who was one of the President's closest friends and most trusted advisors despite the fact that he was a candidate against him for the Republican nomination, announced that the memorial service would be held in the Marble Hall at the Ayuntamiento.

General Wood also cabled President Coolidge assurances of the steadfast support of the Government of the Philippines and the Filipino people.

The Filipinos are mourning President Harding as a good friend who has been lost forever. All political activities have been suspended for two days and the fight which has been made on General Wood by the Filipino politicos has been temporarily discontinued.

Exclusive Dispatch To THE CHINA PRESS

Manila, Aug. 6.—Throughout a dismal rainy day the guns of Fort Santiago, headquarters of the American Army in the Philippines, punctured the rain every hour with mournful booms in memory of the late president.

Stocks Decline When Street Hears Of Harding Death

New York, Aug. 6.—After the first shock of the death of President Harding had passed leaders of industry here expressed confidence in President Coolidge though there was much speculation over how the nation's material welfare would be affected.

Some little difference of opinion was manifested concerning how the swift shift of power at Washington might affect business.

"I am disturbed by the outlook", said Judge Elbert Gary. "This is a national calamity and the business world must suffer temporarily."

On the other hand Charles Mitchell, President of the National City Bank, asserted that the change in presidents would be carried into effect without stirring the surface of business and economic affairs.

Active selling marked the opening of the stock market today which resulted in a considerable slump in prices of leading issues. Such quoted stocks as Studebaker and Pan-American fell off sharply while Great Northern preferred dropped to its lowest level since 896. Good buying support was forthcoming for United States Steel which recovered its early losses.

Besides the many officials and civilians who went to the ship to see the popular Consul-General off there was a company of Japanese volunteers, which paraded at the wharf and a Chinese band sent by the Chinese Police Bureau of Shanghai. The band played the Japanese national anthem as the ship moved off.

ECONOMICALLY GERMANY IS O.K. ENVOY DECLARES

Ambassador To Tokio Sees No Danger From Within; Crops Good

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, August 2.—The German Ambassador, interviewed by a representative of the Kokusai News Agency, made the following statement about the present conditions in Germany:

"In the last few days numerous exciting reports and rumors about the internal conditions in Germany have been afloat. I am glad to state that they are rather exaggerated.

"Economic conditions in Germany of course grew more serious during the last weeks in consequence of the heavy depreciation of currency and of unexpected difficulties in the distribution of food supplies. Owing to the activities of the radical parties who tried to take advantage of this state of affairs by planning disturbances for the end of July, public opinion in Germany was, in fact, in a state of tension.

"According to cable information from Berlin, the Government of the Reich, however, as well as the Governments of the Federal States, was perfectly able to control the situation throughout the country so that no serious riots took place, and the tension disappeared with the breaking down of the radical plots. With the beginning of the new harvest which promises to be an excellent one, food conditions will become normal before long.

"There is no fear of further disturbances as the Government is willing and strong enough to check any attempts against public order."

lines, but give the Soochow Creek crowd a chance at a "soft 'un" and the way claims will come in for every imaginable thing is a revelation.

Machinery and Mill equipment and supplies are an important feature of the Import Trade. Industrial development in China is slow but steady and in recent years numbers of mints, Flour and Cotton Mills, Cigarette, Soap and Match-making factories have come into existence. Rice and Cleaning Mills and Cement Factories are increasing and there is plenty of scope in this country for marked development in these projects. Knitting Mills for the manufacture of Hosiery are on the increase too. The import Firms with efficient engineering Departments get all this trade, which ordinarily is lucrative, for in the hands of Chinese artisans and machinists it is claimed that a plant depreciates at the rate of 20 to 25 percent per year, so that having sold the original equipment and supplies at the rate of average depreciation the Firm can practically get a repeat order in 4 to 5 years. The financing of Industrials in China, is, however, a very complex and unsatisfactory matter as the original concerns are usually under-capitalised and start off by ordering a plant too big for their requirements and then find themselves short of working capital. Mills and mill equipment are responsible for tying up more Foreign Firms' money, in China, than any other lines.

The Chemical and Drug Trade is also one of the chief factors of the Import Trade. These lines are specialised in by some Import Firms, and where so specialised the Trade is satisfactory and attractive. A number of sundry Drug lines are however handled by the average general Import House in catering to the requirements of the soap and match factories. Strychnine is largely imported for the furrier trade in North China. The Chinese use large quantities of sugar of milk in the preparation of Pills—their favorite manner of taking medicine. Sundry Drugs, Patent Medicines and Oil Emulsions are extensively used.

Most everything else imported into China is classified as "sundries" and under the classification may be found lines whose values run into tremendous figures. For instance there are enormous quantities of Tobacco and cigarettes imported notwithstanding that the Chinese have a lot of domestic Tobacco which they convert into cigarettes for local consumption. China imports Foreign Leather on a large scale despite the fact that she is one of the world's leading exporters of Hides and Skins. The few Tanneries in China use of course Foreign Tanning Extracts such as Quebracho, Wattle Bark, Oak Bark etc. It is scarcely necessary to mention the extent to which China imports Kerosene Oil and its allied patroleum products, paraffine wax, lubricating oil etc. Carbon black is imported for the manufacture of stick and printing inks.

Lumber plays an important role in the Imports of China due to the poor state of forestry out here. When crops are bad due either to famine or flood, enormous quantities of wheat and flour are imported from America, Canada and Australia. India supplies China exclusively with gunny bags and Hessian Cloth for her domestic and export requirements. Due to the increasing popularity of the Chinese game of Mah Jongg, ox shin bones are now quite an item of Import for the manufacture of the bone tiles. Paper is a staple line of Imports too and runs into about 20 million Taels a year.

These and a host of other lines constitute the "sundries" import trade of China and must be distinguished and differentiated from a further class of sundries known commonly as the "Muck and Truck Trade." This consists principally of Hollow ware, cutlery, glasses and glassware, shoes and hosiery, Brummagem jewellery, garters, sunshades and everything else foreign that the Chinese use now-a-days. The "muck and truck" trade is usually handled on an Indent basis, for a stipulated commission, the firms catering to this class of trade selling as per sample. This class of trade, whilst running into volume, has been practically discarded by all the big Firms, as the overhead attendant on these lines is not commensurate with the profits or commission obtainable, and the lines being of a petty nature and handled by petty merchants are most vexatious.

As suggested in a previous article the Import Trade of China requires a few reforms, viz. a standardised form of contract and the necessity of financial protection to the Import merchant whereby the native dealer should be compelled to put up credit or satisfactory margins to cover his bookings.

Soviet Says King Favors Recognition

(Eastern News Agency)

Moscow, August 6.—The visit to Moscow of Mr. King, an American Senator—who is well known as an opponent to the recognition of Russia—and party is being observed with keen interest. In the course of an interview with Russian press representatives, with reference to the question as to the recognition of Russia, Mr. King is alleged to have stated that he admitted that it was essential for the United States to recognise Russia so far as trade was concerned, and added that in the same way that America was carrying on transactions with Mexico, who had not yet been officially recognised, it would be possible, in the opinion of most Americans, to trade with Russia.

Frankly speaking, Mr. King added, though there are not a few people in the political circles of the United States who are opposed to the recognition of Russia, he intends to make further investigations into the actual state of affairs in this country.

U. S. Court Goes Into Mourning

The United States Court for China, the Tientsin American Chamber of Commerce, and the Bar of the United States Court for China in North China expressed their deep regret at the passing of President Warren G. Harding when the news was received in Tientsin.

Before business commenced at the morning session of the Court Mr. Richard T. Evans, representing the Bar, read the following resolution before Court:

DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT

Whereas, tidings of the death of President Warren G. Harding reached the United States Court for China at the opening of the afternoon session at Tientsin on August 3, 1923, and,

Whereas out of respect to the memory of the deceased, the Court forthwith adjourned on the decision to prepare a suitable testimonial for inscription in the Minutes of the Court:

Be It Resolved that we Members of the Bar of the United States Court for China in North China, at a session of Court holden the fourth day of August 1923 at half past nine o'clock in the forenoon at the American Consulate General in Tientsin China do testify to the loss of our country in the death of Warren G. Harding late President of the United States of America, and we say that we mourn the passing of this loyal servant of our people.

President Harding was an able executive, a first citizen faithful in his obligations to his fellow citizens, a man of peace, and a fair judge, who at his election received the suffrages of more persons than have ever been given to any man for any office since the world began.

President Harding was always keenly interested in affairs in the Far East, and by his death Americans in China have lost a friend. President Harding was especially interested in the United States Court for China and all who practice and officiate in this Court are deeply affected at his death.

And Be It Further Resolved that we express our sympathy with Mrs. Harding in her bereavement.

Wherefore we pray the Court that this Resolution be inscribed in the official minutes of this Honorable Court, and that a copy thereof be forwarded to the Secretary of State and to Mrs. Harding.

Richard T. Evans,
Theodore E. Simmang,
Charles J. Fox,
Orin D. Walker,
Isidor A. Landesman.

JUDGE LOBINGIER REPLIES

In reply to this resolution, His Honor, Judge Lobingier said:

"The Court has listened with profound interest to the resolutions of the Bar and their recitals have the Court's entire approval. For, relatively no institution lost more than this Court from his deplorable and untimely death. He was not a lawyer, but as he once remarked to me, very modestly, "I studied law for about a year, before taking up newspaper work." And that brief experience gave him an interest in courts and their problems which has been very much worth while to us. He was, as the resolutions have so well set forth a friend of this court. He believed in strengthening and not weakening it and had he lived, some of the most cherished reforms of its friends and well wishers would almost certainly have been realised. Fortunately his constitutional successor is a lawyer, in close touch with President Harding's policies and purposes and in a favorable position to carry on his work. President Harding was not only our chief executive. He was a broad minded, generous and sympathetic man who will go down to history as our great, human President. In profound sorrow we direct that these fitting resolutions of the Bar be spread upon the minutes of the Court and that its hall of session be draped in mourning for thirty days."

Russian Boxers Provide Thrills At The Stadium

Kid Cossack Knocks Out Ah Nee, Bouncer Of Ricsha Coolies' Guild; Referee Sam Davis Loses A Shirt

By Westa

The first of what the Stadium management describes as "try out" nights proved a big success at the Great Western Road establishment last evening. The fighters—16 in all—were Russians for the most part, with a sprinkling of Chinese and Filipinos. The Russians distinguished themselves more by a willingness to mix it than by a display of familiarity with the rules and regulation promulgated by the late Marquis of Queensberry. Fight fans, however, always are keen for the knuckle dusters who are willing to mix it, hence last night's party was a pleasure to all concerned, and particularly to the house full of spectators.

The main go of the evening was the scrap between Kid Cossack, champion of Siberia, and Ah Nee, who is a tough guy employed as bouncer by the ricsha coolie's guild. This battle went for six rounds, each of which had more action in it than there is buzz in a bumblebee, and about as much sting. The Siberian walloper finally caught Ah Nee on the back of the neck with a left handed swing that sent him spinning through the ropes. They poured ice water on him and at the first sign of life one of his seconds whispered that a bunch of ricsha coolies who had been peeping through a knot hole were giving him the merry raspberry. Even that failed to bring Ah Nee back to life, so the Kid got the decision.

AH GETS EVEN

A few minutes later there was a panic among the ricsha pullers waiting outside, from which the inference was drawn that Ah Nee recovered quickly after they got him out of the ring.

Most of the bouts were fast and furious. Somebody told the Russians that the idea was for two of them to get in the ring with boxing gloves on, and that the last one alive or conscious would be paid some real money.

It took a long time to make them believe this, but Referee Sam Davis, who speaks pidgin Russian fluently, finally got the message across. If Sam could have foreseen the consequences of his oratory he might not have been so eager, for long before the evening was over they had to call the house doctor to revive Sam from collapse due to overwork. This was because the Russians, once they got it into their heads that somebody would actually pay over some real money to the last guy left alive in the ring, couldn't be restrained. Sam tried to make them understand that the idea was three minutes of fighting followed by a one minute rest period, but the Russians couldn't see the necessity for a rest period. They figured that if the excitement was continuous the bird that had offered to pay them some real money wouldn't have a chance to change his mind, whereas if there was a period of calm the gent with the kale might make use of his obviously deficient brain to reflect upon the folly of his proposition, and renig. Finish the fight and get the dough was their slogan.

SAM KEPT BUSY

So Sam had to pry them apart after each round—which was an expensive process to him, seeing that before the first battle was over the eighteen dollar shirt that he wore into the ring had been practically ruined by the Russians who clawed and tore at him in their eagerness to get at each other's throats, and to stay there until their part of the bargain was finished.

Even that was not the end of Sam's troubles. It seems that one of the Russians, after cleaning up his opponent, bit into the referee in the belief that he also had to lick the official before he could hope to get his clutches on the real money that had been offered.

With any other third man in the ring this might have led to a tragedy, but Sam is one of those athletic, outdoor birds who keeps his muscles hard and his wind good by running around the race track every morning before breakfast, in consequence of which he was able to subdue the Russian with a solid right uppercut. The house doctor predicted last night that this Russian probably would regain consciousness sometime today, in which case the Stadium management will surprise him by giving him the real money which he thus doubly earned, along with a nice note from Sam forgiving him for his attack on the referee.

It can be seen from the above that the party at the Stadium last night contained elements of humor as well as excitement. The only fly in the ointment is the danger, now that the word has gone out among the husky young Russians around town that a man has been found who pays real money for fighting, that they will come out to the Stadium and start a civil war.

They are all former soldiers who would rather fight than eat, but being paid for it is a new and pleasing experience to them and they are all eager to get in some good licks before they wake up and discover that it is all a futile dream, like Admiral Kolchak's pay days.

Must Youth be Served? Yes, With Beating!

Willie Ritchie
Babe Adams

Johnny Kilbane
Frank Kramer
Iron man McGinnity
Stanislaus Zbyszko - Abe Kiviat - Ty Cobb - Ed. P. Weston - "Pop" Geers - Jake Daubert

MUST youth be served, as so often we have been told it must? Must it? Well, listen: Iron Man Joe McGinnity, famous idol of the New York baseball fans of two decades ago, just past 52 years old, pitched a four-hit game against Marshalltown, Iowa, in the Mississippi Valley League, Dubuque, winning by 1 to 0. Old Man Jess Willard served youth with an awful beating when he knocked young Floyd Johnson for a flock of goals. Who can drive in the National Circuit better than "Pop" Geers, octogenarian? Old Man Ty Cobb has been playing in the big league long enough to know youth must be served, but the ancient one is clouting well above 300. He has been playing big league ball since 1905 and still has the highest batting average ever made, .420. Then there are Old Man Frank Kramer, undefeated bicycle champion; and old Abel Kiviat, who is doing a come back on the cinder path; and old "Babe" Adams, who celebrated his forty-first birthday by licking the youthful Boston Club. Ancient Walter Johnson, of Washington, doesn't know yet when to stop his speed ball. And Jake Daubert, of the Reds, is so old he surely ought to stop being the best first baseman in the game. How about Stanislaw Zbyszko, wrestler; and Willie Ritchie, comeback lightweight; and gray-haired Johnny Kilbane, world's champion featherweight? And Edward Payson Weston, who can outwalk them all? Yest, youth must be served—with a licking.

Throw 'Em Out

Sports Editor: As a subscriber to the Baseball Fund each year I would like to say a word of thanks to "Old Fan" for his letter a few days ago on the subject of bad language at the game the other day. I was not present at that game but know that such incidents have occurred in the past, and they do not do baseball any good with the community at large.

Is it too much to expect that some official of the Club should remonstrate with these hoodlums, or that failing, that a policeman should be called?

If the Club officials cannot do as much as this there will be some who will consider that a baseball game is not a very desirable place to go to accompanied by ladies and children.

Wind Too Strong For Yacht Races

Yesterday's bi-weekly harbor race had to be postponed on account of the strong wind as it would have been dangerous to attempt sailing in such a gale. The schedule of the Shanghai Yacht Club is to have harbor races twice a week but this season there have been many postponement on account of weather conditions. For the first time this year yesterday, race was postponed on account of the wind being too strong.

The next harbor race is set for Thursday when, weather permitting, four or five yachts will start from the Houseboat "Foam" for a cruise in the river. The race starts at five-thirty.

took that out to protect themselves; it was security in the event of my death.

Witness went on to state that he kept complete books of account which were posted up to date and an outside accountant employed to go through them.

At the date of the receiving order, witness said, there were Tls. 740 in one bank account—otherwise they had practically no money. He (witness) could not then lay his hands on any money.

Witness said there were no other assets which he had not declared.

The Official Receiver—Had you any account in your own name?—Yes.

Where did you keep that?—At the H. and S. Bank.

Was that your own private account?—Yes. It contained out 97 cents

Had you any other account?—I had an account in London with a balance of two or three pounds.

Mr. Dent said the firm experienced very heavy losses from defaulting Chinese. He did not sue the Chinese, but threatened them innumerable times by lawyers' letters.

"The losses were incurred by the Chinese," said Mr. Dent, "but they vanished before we had a chance to get hold of them."

Why did you give them goods without promissory notes?—We did not; they owed us the differences due to depreciation.

Mr. Dent said he had no other interest in any other property outside his own firm. He had a life policy for £3,000 taken out in 1913. This was not in his name, but was taken out under a marriage settlement. One bank took out a policy for £25,000 and another bank for Gold $40,000. There was another policy with the China Mutual in favor of witness's son—taken out in 1915.

In answer to further questions, witness said he had paid Tls. 8,323 in insurance premiums during the last six months. The solicitor acting for him in these proceedings was Mr. Wright.

The Official Receiver—What money or security have you given to your solicitor in respect of these proceedings?—Nothing.

Witness said he had pledged all his stock in trade with the bank. He suspended payment of his debts on July 16, but they had a creditor's meeting two days prior to that date. "my credit was cut on the 13th, my business credit throughout the world was cut."

Have you incurred any losses by speculation, other than your own trade?—No.

Is it your intention to make a proposal to your creditors by way of a composition?—I have sold the good-will of the silk part of the business for Taels 100 a month for five years which makes Taels 6,000.

Asked as to the cause of his insolvency witness said that they were due to the deliberate breaking of contracts by Chinese purchasers, and the purchasers absconding, also to the chaos in China, to the trouble in the Ruhr district and other things, which made it almost impossible for ...ess to be carried on.

When did you know you could not meet your debts?—In June, 1920, I foresaw this, but I knew in March, 1921.

When you did know this why did you carry on?—I was instructed to carry on.

By whom?—By my principal creditors

Do you mean by all your principal creditors?—Yes.

PRINCIPAL CREDITORS

Who do you call your principal creditors at that time?—The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation, Hobson and Co., of Manchester, the International Banking Corporation who were representing Hill and Buckner of New York, the Bank de l'Indo Chine and the Bank Industrielle.

Witness said his income was Taels 750 per month. This he drew from the firm as salary. When he went home in 1919 he took a few thousand taels but after his return he took very little.

Witness said he had made a full disclosure of all he knew. He formerly had two motor cars, which he intended to sell but could not find a buyer. He purchased a lighter car on money borrowed from his father.

This closed the examination, no response being made to his Lordship's intimation that any creditors present were entitled to ask questions of witness.

ITALY ADHERES TO BRITISH PLAN FOR RUHRPEACE

Statement Says Rome Is Opposed To Military Occupation

(Reuter's Service)

Rome, August 7.—A semi-official statement says that the Italian reply to Britain adheres to the intentions of Britain in seeking to ease the European situation, and favors discussion of the British proposals. It believes that a general, final settlement of reparations must include settlement of the question of inter-Allied debts.

The reply says that, while foreseeing the difficulties in the way of the British proposal to convene a body of experts to determine Germany's capacity to pay and the method of payment, Italy does not exclude such a measure from the preliminary steps. It reiterates that Italy is opposed to passive resistance and all further military occupation of the Ruhr, and favors gradual reduction of the Franco-Belgian occupation when a general understanding is reached and guaranteed.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Aug. 6.—The mixed temporary commission, for the reduction of armaments continued the discussion. In the first reading the project dealt with the mutual assistance amongst the States. The project contains 19 articles.

The Monday meeting under the chairmanship of M. Lebrun was consecrated to the examination of article 7 which provides for the introduction of particular treaties into the frame work of the general treaty.

The Italian delegation submitted various amendments to this article.

The commission passed in the first reading of the principle of the particular defensive treaty as a way for the application of the general treaty of guarantees.

The general treaty of assistance being not to act but after ascertaining the nature of the aggression, by the Upper Council of the League of Rations the definitive agreements might thus in that case allow the attacked nation to meet with more security the agressors since she sees herself endangered and without awaiting for the decision of the Council of the League of Nations.

In order to be valid these particular agreements must always be previously submitted for the approval of the Council of the League of Nations.

British Getting Gradually Nearer To Separate Action

London, August 5.—The significant fact is divulged that the Government is willing to publish all the documents in the recent phase of the reparations question. The admission reveals the fact that hope of agreement with France is abandoned. Attention is concentrated on the statement made by Premier Baldwin.

The Times, in drawing attention to the extreme gravity of the issue, declares that the commercial and industrial life of the British Empire is being paralyzed by European uncertainty and if that uncertainty is prolonged instability in England must produce a serious depression of the whole economic life.

There is little speculation about the next development. The situation is so difficult that none sees a clear course. It is suggested that the first step will be publicity: the second, separate British and Italian replies to Berlin; the third, German application for admission into the League of Nations, with a view to League intervention. This might involve France's secession, but France is clearly determined to go her own way, confident that Germany either must surrender or break up soon.

Every British correspondent in Berlin agrees that no German government dares to surrender under the peril of physical as well as political death; but Berlin politicians are beginning to say there is now no choice between allowing the Reich to dissolve and a bloody civil war for unity.

The monetary situation is a mixture of nightmare and comic opera. The wages of skilled artisans average 5,000,000 marks a month, the equivalent of ten Mex. Yesterday in Berlin potatoes cost 2,000,000 marks a hundred weight. The unemployed receive huge doles, which are almost worthless before the week is out. The second class fare between Dresden and Berlin is 24,000 marks, equal to one penny. The first class fare between Zurich and Berlin costs 16,000,000 marks if bought at Zurich and 2,000,000 if bought at Berlin.

The State railways have to buy part of their coal in England with gold.

Where Nine Men Died In Sea Battle

WHEN the tiny 50-foot schooner Mary Beatrice entered New York Harbor there was unfolded one of the most dramatic stories the sea has ever known. Twenty Chinese offered the captain of the vessel $300 apiece to smuggle them into the United States from Cuba. They paid $250 each and were to pay the balance when landed. The captain deserted the ship off Rum Runners' Row, Sandy Hook. Then the crew tried to rob the Chinese, and a battle followed. Five Chinese, two white members of the crew and two negroes were slain. When the crew was wiped out the remaining Chinese managed to get the vessel into port.

Firpo Fails To Stop Homer Smith In Omaha Battle

Omaha, Nebraska, Aug. 6.—Failing for the first time to score a knock-out from an opponent since he has come to the United States Luis Angel Firpo was compelled to go the whole distance of ten rounds in his fight here with Homer Smith of Kalamazoo although he knocked Smith down almost at will all through the fight the decision of which was given to the boy from the Argentine.

Four Americans Hold Middle Distance Records

Four American runners hold the world's records in the 300, 400 600 and 880 yards runs. Charles W. Paddock, the 100 and 220 record holder, ran the 300 yard dash in 30.2 seconds on April 23, 1921. J. E. (Ted) Meredith ran the 440 in 47.4 seconds on October 27, 1916. M. W. Shepard ran the 600 in 1 minute, 52.2 seconds on August 14, 1910, and Meredith ran the 880 in 1 minute, 52.2 seconds on May 13, 1916.

World's Records For 100 And 220 Dashes

The world's record for the 100-yard dash is held jointly by D. J. Kelly, Howard P. Drew (the negro runner) and Charles W. Paddock, all Americans, at 9.6 seconds. Kelly made the original record in the United States on June 23, 1906; Drew made in on March 28, 1914, and Paddock has sped the distance four times during 1921.

Paddock also established the record for the 220 of 20.5 seconds on March 26, 1921, the same day he made his first record in the 100.

Historic Love Notes

BY JOSEPH KAYE

Of the many striking personalities that the French Revolution gave birth to Charlotte Corday takes a prominent place. She was a provincial girl, whose forbears were of the nobility. Her character was as sweet as her features were beautiful, and her mind was inclined to study and the classics.

When the Revolution, with its horrible holiday of blood, struck the land Charlotte's shocked senses created as the chief instigator of the executions Jean Paul Marat, the revolutionary dictator. Marat was not the only one responsible for the murderous measures against the real and alleged enemies of the republic, but doubtless the fact that Marat came from her part of the country caused him to be accused in her mind as the arch fiend of the tribunal.

Inspired by a misguided thought of saving her country by the elimination of Marat, she applied for a passport to enter Paris and left for the capital.

Marat, when he left his medical profession and scientific studies to throw himself into the Revolution—and become a changed man in doing so—made numerous enemies and at one time to elude assassins had to hide in the sewers of Paris. Burrowing in this filth he contracted a skin disease which was both painful for him and made him a repulsive object.

When Charlotte Corday arrived in Paris, Marat was forced by the progress of his malady to take hot baths for long periods at a time. It was in this state that Charlotte saw him when he finally consented to see her. After a few questions and answers regarding her coming, Charlotte suddenly snatched out a long butcher knife she had concealed in her blouse and drove it with all her strength into Marat's body, as he lolled in the bath-tub wrapped in a blanket. The knife went through Marat's left lung and heart, and killed him.

For this crime Charlotte Corday was sentenced to the guillotine and it was with this closing incident of her life that romance came, although she herself was never to know it.

Before her trial, when all Paris spoke of a strange and terrible vixen who had come from the country and foully murdered a great patriot, a young German student in Paris named Adam Lux became anxious to see what the terrible woman looked like.

He therefore took the opportunity the public trial afforded and was present when Charlotte was tried. The sight of the fair and sad-faced girl was such a revelation to Lux that after it was over he could not erase her image from his mind or heart. He brooded over her and her coming execution constantly and quickly his emotional impulsiveness changed to love, the strong sympathy he first felt for her.

On the day of her execution Lux's feeling reached a climax and as he saw her head fall into the bloody welter on the scaffold he became almost mad with grief and rage and swore to consecrate himself to her memory. To his dead love he then wrote a striking letter, later printing it and distributing it broadcast in a new-born effort to wage war against the existing leaders. Part of this letter follows:

"... The guillotine is no longer a disgrace. It has become a sacred altar, from which every taint has been removed by the innocent blood shed there on July 17 (modern dating). Forgive me, my divine Charlotte, if I find it impossible at the last moment to show the courage and the gentleness that were yours. I glory because you are superior to me, for it is right that she who is adored should be higher and more glorious than her adorer!"

The effect of this letter was the arrest of Lux on the charge of treason. Such a charge could have but one result—the guillotine; but even the hardened judges of the tribunal could not bring themselves to send to his death a man so obviously innocent of real treason as Lux and offered him a passport to Germany if he would retract the statements he made in the letter to Charlotte.

Lux scornfully refused the offer and even threatened further actions against the government if he were freed. There was then nothing to do but send the young man to the guillotine, and there he soon after died, happy in the thought that he shared the same fate as his Charlotte.

It is odd and a strange coincidence that both Charlote Corday and Adam Lux should have died for rebellion against the revolutionary government, and that their motives should both have been so visionary and their efforts so futile.

Wilson's Daughter In Advertising Business

MISS Margaret Woodrow Wilson, daughter of the former President, has entered the advertising business in New York. Her first day at her desk was productive of an excellent contract. After studying at the Women's College, in Baltimore, where she completed her musical education, she studied singing in New York and abroad. During the war she sang in camps in America and in France for the soldiers.

They Say—

Mrs. Martin E. Johnson, wife of the explorer who will accompany him to South Africa shortly to remain five years—"I think a wife ought to be interested in anything that interests her husband. It took me a long time, but now I confess the lure of the tropics has got into my blood, too, and I am as eager to start off again as my husband is. It isn't all a lark, this travelling in out-of-the-way places. One reason why I always go along on every little side trip from our headquarters is that one never can tell what is likely to happen, and if anything serious does happen I want to be right there to have it happen to me, too. I help to keep my husband well by cooking American food for him instead of depending on native dishes."

Andre Citroen, French automobile manufacturer, known as "the Henry Ford of France"—"I think there is plenty of room for more cars in America. Americans like something new and they like it quick and good. I intend to begin the construction of a factory near New York in October and be building automobiles by February. I believe the French engineer is second to none in planning and production, nevertheless, I have found in America that American engineers can give me great help in improving the rate of output and solving problems to which French helpers are unused. I picked in America some skilled men the like of which I haven't found before and they are coming abroad to help me. With their customary American energy I expect, by their aid, to triple the output of my factory."

James E. Gray, president of the National Employment Exchange—"One year ago there was an oversupply of office workers. Salaries fell off and employers' requirements grew stiffer and stiffer. Executives selected new workers with a fine-tooth comb. It was then an employers' market. Today there is an actual shortage in standard grades of office help and workers are in a position where they can virtually select their employers. For example, position for stenographers are going begging at $1,300 a year, while the young women available for them are picking and choosing among jobs that outnumber them three to two. We are now in a workers' market and must face a period of slowly advancing salaries. Executives will do well to review thoughtfully their present office payroll schedules—especially those between $1,000 and $2,000 per annum—if they wish to avoid increasing turnover."

To stop a wagging tongue, stop your ears.

Two pairs of gloves beat three of a kind.

Be a reformer if you will, but begin on yourself.

When a man aims at nothing he seldom misses his target.

Only the dyspeptic can eat his cake and feel that he still has it.

Revenge may be sweet, but seeking it sours one's disposition.

And the man who is anxious to learn is not ashamed to ask questions.

Lots of men would be worse than they are if they knew how to go about it.

One kind of enemy is a friend who does not oppose you when you are wrong.

On account of the death of Mr. Abe Stein, President of Abe Stein & Co. Inc., New York, the offices of the Undersigned will be closed to public business on the 8th 9th and 10th instants. CHINA & JAVA EXPORT Co.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

August 7, 1923

Spot and forward bar silver were each down 1-16d in London on Saturday and the New York price declined on the same day to 62-⅝ cents. The London New York cross rate also declined to 45-⅝. Our official quotations here today were unchanged from Saturday, last day on which we did business.

Our market here today opened steady and became firm in the course of the day, but eased off slightly again at the close.

The highest rates at which business in Sterling was done were 3s. 0 11d. for August, 3s. 0⅝ for September and 3s. 0⅞d. for October. The highest rates for Gold Dollars were 69⅞ for near and forward deliveries.

However, at the close there were good buyers of both Sterling and Gold Dollars at these rates with sellers of Sterling at ⅛d. and of Gold Dollars at ⅛ point lower.

While Yen at one time was done at 69⅜ for August and 69⅞ for forward deliveries, there were no sellers at the close at better than 70 for any delivery.

Banks were quoting 3s. 1⅛d., 71½ and 1240 for Sterling, Gold Dollar and Franc bills respectively.

India sold silver in London yesterday and the market is reported as steady. New York also report their market as steady.

Naval Reserve Officer Tells Astonishing Tale Of Shanghai

Startling allegations of having been captured and tortured by Japanese consular police in the Imperial Japanese Consulate on Wusungpoo Road were made by Lieut. Lawrence Gallagher, U. S. Naval Reserves, in a report made to the Commanding Officer of the 12th Naval District upon his arrival at San Francisco, according to The San Francisco Chronicle.

The Chronicle's astounding story of his wild night in Shanghai read as follows:

"A harrowing report of having been kidnaped, put to torture and made to face a simulated firing squad by Japanese officials in Shanghai, who tried to force from him naval secrets of the United States which they believed him to possess was made yesterday to the navy authorities here by Lieutenant Lawrence Gallagher of the United States Naval Reserve force.

"Stating that the Japanese acted without cause, he announced his intention of taking the matter up through the official channels of the American naval intelligence department.

"Lieutenant Gallagher went to Shanghai as second mate of the Standard Oil tanker Algonquin. He was standing in front of the Palace Hotel in that city and hailed a taxicab to take him to the Astor hotel. Instead of being driven to his destination he reports that the cab which was driven by a Japanese was soon speeding through the Japanese concession and finally drew up in front of the Imperial Japanese police headquarters.

"According to his report, the police officials questioned him regarding his mission in China and about confidential naval information of the United States and upon his stating that he had no information and "would not give it to them if he had," they put him to the torture, he alleges. He says they bound his wrists with leather thongs which they proceeded to tighten until the pain was unbearable. As a last resort they stood him, he said, against the prison wall and brought out a firing squad. When the firing squad shot at him with blank cartridges he declares that he was not sure for a moment whether he was dead or alive. After hours of persistent examination and abuse he was released.

"Lieutenant Gallagher believes that the Japanese mistook him for some officer of the United States naval intelligence service.

"Acting upon the theory that this may be the case, photographs of Lieutenant Gallagher will be sent to the director of naval intelligence, Washington, D. C., and copies forwarded to the American authorities in the Orient for investigation. Today Gallagher's official report of the experience will be in the hands of the naval authorities at the Twelfth Naval District headquarters. Commander A. S. Rees, Twelfth Naval District intelligence officer, will have charge of the case.

"Lieutenant Gallagher served during the entire war as an officer of the United States Navy. For the past six months he has been with the Standard Oil Company on the Algonquin. Despite his war service and his familiarity with the ways of the Orient he still speaks of his experience with a shudder. As the Algonquin sailed at 4 o'clock in the morning, following his release by the Japanese, he had not time to recover from the shock on land. The Algonquin made only a twelve-hour stop at Shanghai.

"In the absence of Rear-Admiral Edward Simpson, commanding the 12th Naval District, who is on leave, the report will be rushed to Washington, D. C., with the official approval of Captain Stanford E. Moses, assistant commandant of the district. It is expected that a searching investigation into the incident will be made."

The typhoon will strike the coast about latitude 28.° Rough weather and squalls between Foochow and the mouth of the Yangtsze. The typhoon from the Carolines will cross the 15th parallel, North-Westwards, by the North of Yap.

The typhoon has arrived near Wenchow; it may incline more to the North-West, to threaten the stations of the Yangtze, passing by the West of Shanghai. Very hard squalls of the East quadrant and rough weather between the North of the Formosa strait and the mouth of the Yangtze.

Russian Papers—Red, But Not Read

"WE have no press," say the Bolshevists in Russia; all we have is an elaborate machinery for spoiling paper," and the correspondent who quotes this confession adds that most of the Soviet journals are "printed on paper which even the Russian worker's modest taste does not allow him to use for rolling up his cigarettes." It was easy to exterminate the non-Communist press, we are told. Even though the Petrograd Day "changed its name consecutively to Midday, Evening, Midnight, and Night," it "finally succumbed" to the "unequal game of hide and seek." All private publications were finally suppressed. But it has been impossible, so far, to replace them with interesting, readable and influential Soviet papers. In the New Statesman (London) the correspondent observes:

"Large sums of money were assigned for the upkeep of these papers, but the difficulties became manifest from the outset. The intelligentsia, with few exceptions, stubbornly refused to lend itself to the work of writing for the new papers, and so the press was not only reduced to a mere mouthpiece of a small despotic group, but came to be produced by men who had neither the aptitude nor the necessary training for their task. Had brightness and talent not forsaken the new press, the reading public, failing anything else, might still have found some interest in it.

"It should be borne in mind that the Russian people have never known an entirely free press. The history of the Russian press is, after all, to a great extent, the history of its censorship. But the dullness and crudeness of the Soviet press were so palpable that the people turned away from it in disgust. If the papers of Petrograd and Moscow are of a higher standard, it is because they are in the hands of Bolsheviks, who in exile abroad or in secret in Russia had trained their pen to some degree of proficiency. But such men are rare, and the provincial press is left to men of low intelligence and inferior education. The Moscow Pravda itself gave a not untrue description of its contemporaries: 'The provincial papers,' it said, 'are as like as two drops of water. Their very appearance, uniform and gray, inspires one with a sense of dullness. On opening such a paper one finds in it some 'high politics,' a few foreign wireless messages and a couple of articles. The articles are regularly written by the same one or two writers, and the same stereotyped phrases and the same ideas are repeated ad nauseam."

"Beneath criticism" is the phrase applied to "an overwhelming majority of the provincial papers" by a circular in which the Russian Communist party urges that "energetic measures be taken to raise the status of the press." Russia's New Economic Policy, the compromise between Communism and Capitalism, has not had that effect, for—

"Like many other State industries, on the advent of the New Economic Policy, the press had to be thrown on its own resources. Its fate was in the hands of the reading public, and the consequences did not take long to tell, for it still remained what it had always been—a colorless instrument of distasteful propaganda. It was not, however, totally forsaken by the Soviet Government. In many districts compulsory subscriptions were forced from small traders and Communist party members; but evasions were wholesale, and the futility of the order soon became apparent. A measure which allowed the insertion of advertisements, although slightly more efficacious for a time, proved after a while equally useless. The losses of the papers began to increase at a tremendous rate. This decline was rapid and general; papers closed down one after another, not merely in outlying districts but in the large centers.

"At a meeting last autumn of the Central Bureau of Press Workers, a report was read showing the position of the Soviet press. On January 1, 1922, it was stated, there had been 803 newspapers; in a space of seven months this number had been reduced to 299. The daily number of papers printed had been 2,661,000 in January; in August it was 932,000.

"A slight revival was brought about in the winter months by the allocation of further subsidies. The total circulation of the Soviet press was raised to 1,300,000. What this expresses can be best judged by the fact that the circulation of one paper in pre-revolutionary days, the Moscow Ruskolje Slovo, exceeded 1,200,000. New endeavors were made to interest the provincial and industrial workers and the Communists. Factory hands, for instance, were asked to send character sketches of their directors the best sketch to receive a money prize. The same principle was applied in the villages where Communists were to write of the doings of the peasants. But this practise had to be abandoned; for the murders of these factory and village correspondents became a regular occurrence, and the outrages extended to other Soviet journalists, two of the Pravda's prominent correspondents losing their lives."

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

All his life he had been preaching
hopefulness;
"Every failure," he repeated, day by day,
"May be made a stepping-stone to reach success,
Faith will help to clear obstructions from your way;
If you stumble, rise with courage still to try
Learn to think that you can do
the thing you must;
Let the goal that you expect to reach be high,
Be worthy of your keenest
rival's trust.
"If today an opportunity is lost,
Tomorrow may bring others

OATHS OF FRIENDSHIP

In the country of Yuch when the idea of "sworn brothers" first came into usage, when a man made friends with another they set up an altar of earth and sacrificed upon it a dog and a cock, reciting this age-old oath as they did so:

If you were riding in a coach
And I were wearing a 'li',
And one day we met in the road,
You would get down and bow.
If you were carrying a 'teng',
And I were riding on a horse,
And one day we met in the road
I would get down for you.
Shang Ya!
I want to be your friend
For ever and ever without break

Tribute To President Harding From The Press Of China

Every newspaper in China, native and foreign, has paid tribute to the late President of the United States in a manner that is extremely pleasing to Americans. Representative editorials from North China papers are as follows:

After the reassuring bulletins of the past two days, the laconic but fateful Reuter cable flashed across the world, and received here at about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, announcing that President Harding was dead, came as a stunning surprise. We may not know before this issue goes to press what was the cause of the collapse of the patient. But whatever the medical verdict may be it became our instant conviction, shared doubtless by most people, that it was his exalted position that had consumed the President. The question will certainly agitate the speculations of millions of people whether or not the Presidency of the United States is not too great a position for any man to bear in times so terrible as the epoch through which civilisation has been passing since the World War began. There is no office in the world to be compared with that of the Presidency of the United States. The makers of the Constitution conferred upon the holder of that post responsibilities that were perhaps excessive even in the days when America was an infant among the nations. The President's powers have not been diminished in the generations that have passed. Today he is the head of a nation of over one hundred millions, whose domestic responsibilities are commensurate with the vast growth of the American Republic, and whose international responsibilities have become even greater by virtue of America's predominant position in the world. President Woodrow Wilson was crushed beneath the cares of his office, and became an invalid and a cripple, a martyr to high duty and to the sacred principles which he labored so mightily to prosper. When President Harding succeeded him he went to the White House in full possession of physical vigor, magnificently equipped in this respect for the superhuman task that has been entrusted to him by an enormous majority of the American people. "His 58 years find him a strong man and a fine figure of a man, nearly six feet in height, with a splendidly balanced and functioning body," we read. It is less than two and a half years since Mr. Harding entered upon his duties. He had borne the strain to all appearances remarkably well. That was due perhaps as much to the curious equability of his mind and his unshakable poise as to his physical vitality. But during the tour which has come to so tragic a close, the blistering heat which he encountered at certain of the cities he visited in the Middle-West revealed that the President's physical powers had not passed through the crucible unscathed. The anxiety as to whether the President's constitution would stand the strain provoked by the complications that developed was clearly demonstrated in one of the bulletins. "We are running with a very handicapped machine," said General Sawyer, the President's physician. "Man hath but a short time to live," but it is extremely probable that but for the manner in which the President's vitality had been undermined by the Atlas-like burden of his position he would have recovered.

This is not the moment or the place for an appraisal of the policies of Mr. Harding. The world will rather think of Harding as the man than as Harding the President in the peculiarly affecting circumstances which bring him to its notice today. Even his political opponents will not impose any perceptible strain upon their charity and magnanimity to admit that he has done what he could. The limitations that one has so often criticised are after all such as have been created by circumstances beyond the control even of a greater intellect. Mr. Harding was above all things a practical man. He did not attempt to surmount impossible obstacles. Conciliation was his watchword, and is especially expressed in his World Court proposals, which, tame and tentative as they seemed to many in America and to more in other countries, had at least the supreme merit of ensuring their adoption by the consent of the overwhelming body of opinion, and of meeting the objections of all save the most irreconcilable politicians in America. Half a loaf is better than no bread. He had learnt of his predecessor's bitter experiences, and that the supreme gift of successful statesmanship is to make haste slowly and win consent rather than challenge hostility. He was more "interested in harmonising opposing elements," and more anxious "to effect our helpful commitment to the Court" than to score a victory for Executive insistence. It will not be gainsaid that President Harding accepted the implications of the leadership of civilisation to which his country has been called as fully as any man, and though he has been slow to act, and the fruits of his travail may seem feeble, yet in the end he may succeed where Mr. Wilson failed. It is to his honor, more than to the credit of his political acumen, that he placed the issue of America's international responsibilities in the forefront of his program during his recent tour and that his last great constructive act of policy was to restore the wider vision of human interests and of the purposes and responsibilities of a people who are charged by Destiny with a momentous task. A stricken world looks to America for help, and we refuse to believe that it will look in vain.

President Harding was born in Ohio on November 2, 1865, and was thus in his 58th year. He started his career in Marion, Ohio as the publisher and editor of a small newspaper, which eventually became the most influential daily in that part of the State. He was elected to the Senate of his native State in 1900 and became Lieutenant-Governor four years later, occupying that post until 1906. He was the Republican nominee for the Governorship in 1910, but was defeated. It was not until 1915 that he was elected to the Senate of the United States. Though he had gained some reputation in Congress for his oratory and dignity of presence, Senator Harding was practically unknown to the country at large in 1916, when he was put forward as a possible "dark horse" candidate for the Presidency. His nomination by the Republican Convention on June 12, 1920, came in the nature of a surprise. It was not until after the seventh ballot that his name became prominent, but on the ninth ballot he led with 374 votes, and on the tenth ballot he received over 690 votes, 200 more than a majority. The delegates from Wisconsin alone opposed a motion to make his nomination unanimous. When the usual chorus of disgruntled factions had ascended, and the atmosphere cleared, it was found that the nomination of Mr. Harding had cemented the Party more unitedly than at any time for 12 years. He was elected President by an enormous majority. Of 511 electoral votes the Republican candidate received 404. The total popular vote was about 26,000,000, and the popular majority of Messrs. Harding and Coolidge was approximately 6,000,000. But though President Harding entered upon his duties with so decisive a mandate, he has encountered considerable difficulties. The rebellious heart of man is not easily conquered, and the results of the Congressional election and the rise of the so-called Progressive element not only threatened the solidarity of his Party but menaced the Administration with an opposition whose opportunism and factiousness were encouraged by its new-found strength. But Mr. Harding's psychology was founded on a fundamental truth, peculiarly applicable to the position in which he found himself a little over two years ago, and rendered especially poignant by

The Summer-time Lover

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Once upon a time I read a charming little poem which began: "What is the worth of an April lover?" It went on to tell how Spring with its fickle moods of promise often inspires to an emotion as fleeting as a bright Spring day. It ended by saying that the man who could love when the February pavements were slippery with sleet and the March winds were doing a little preliminary howling was the chap to trust. And I felt like cheering as I read this.

Let's remember it now.

Droning July days drifting down stream in a canoe, tramping through pine woods or breasting the breakers all suggest romance. Do you know-why? It is partly because it is so much more convenient to have a masculine escort for the festivities. It is partly because it seems so unsuccessful to wander in the moon-light without a man to pay you compliments. It is also because nature is primitive—and so is the mating instinct.

Most Summer flirtations begin idly—as a result of propinquity, the warm impulse of nature, and the need of having a partner to share your joys. The mating season is on and all nature makes things alluring and dramatic and romantic in order to get her stage setting and her actors.

It is very hard to tell whether you enjoy the man you meet on your Summer vacation or whether you enjoy having him around to help you enjoy things.

There isn't much chance for the acid tests of friendship in Summer flirtations. You make friends with the man who does the thing you like to do. Naturally if you are a fine swimmer, you will gravitate toward the man who dives through the breakers with you—and if tennis is your diversion, your tennis partner and you see a lot of each other. But who wants to base a life on athletic sports in common with one's partner?

Most of you will leave your selective tastes behind when you go away to take your Summer vacation. Carnival is the spirit in the air. You have only two weeks and you proceed to enjoy them. The man at whom you wouldn't look if he were in town just happens to sit at the next table in the dining room and that seems enough to introduce you and to start you racing along the path of easy acquaintanceship.

Don't take your Summer flirtations seriously. Don't put too much stock in your Summer friendships. Before you decide that they mean anything vital in your life, put them to the acid test of a different and less romantic environment. Try out your Summer friends in town, and if they fit in with your every day work-a-day life then call them friends. Otherwise they are merely clouds on your Summer sky.

A Treasure-Trove of Humor From His Newly Discovered Newspaper Writings

YOU CAN'T ALWAYS SOMETIMES TELL

YESTERDAY afternoon a man with long hair and a wooly appearance boarded one of the cars on Travis street.

He had been freely imbibing and besides that bore all the earmarks of a Holy Terror. The car was full of passengers going home to supper and a slight riffle of uneasiness went up and down both rows of seats as the bad man entered.

As soon as he had sized up the people in the car as quite and inoffensive citizens, he proclaimed in a loud voice that he was the only man in Texas that could eat glass, drink Prussic acid, play with the catamounts or take Graeco-Roman falls with a trolley car just by way of recreation. He gave several whoops, and then called on the passengers to stand up and be pulverised by the worst man south of Ohio.

Everybody looked out of the windows and pretended to be greatly interested in something going on outside.

Anybody got a wild beast or a buzz saw or a hornet's nest, gentlemen, that I could chaw up just by way of a lunch. Can't somebody kick me or say I wrote "Beautiful Snow" so that I can use him for a door mat?

One timid woman rang the bell and got off the car, and the conductor got out on the rear platform and pretended not to hear. In one corner of the car sat a young man who had been quietly reading a newspaper all the while. He was a determined looking fellow with a square jaw and broad shoulders. A druggist who was riding home to supper whispered to the man next to him.

"See that fellow reading the paper? That's Babbit, the best amateur boxer in Houston. He ain't afraid of anything on earth. There ain't anything in the Y.M.C.A. athletic rooms that can put on the gloves with him. If that fellow fools with Babbit he'll think lightening struck him. Babbit's a quiet man, but terrible when aroused."

Presently the bad man snatched Babbit's paper out of his hand and threw it out of the window.

"Now watch Babbit do him up," whispered the druggist gleefully.

The great amateur rose quickly and said, "I am going to give you a good thrashing sir, and don't say I didn't warn you."

Then he led with his famous upper cut for the bad man's jaw. The bad man ducked like a wild duck when you shoot at him, then he jumped about four feet car with a number 10 boot. Then he hit Babbit nine times on the nose, jammed him down in the corner and bit a piece out of his ear, tore his coat down the back and gave him four or five punches below the belt and then dragged the athlete down the aisle of the car onto the platform and bumped his head for a while on the brake and then threw him off the car and jumped off after him.

As the car rounded the curve, the passengers looked and saw the bad man sitting on Babbit and filling his mouth with sand.

"These things sometimes turn out different from what you expected," said the druggist, as he slipped a little piece of cinnamon into his mouth.

the illustration which the experiences of President Wilson afforded. One man alone cannot decide the destiny of a mighty nation exercising democratic rights and enjoying great personal liberties. Nor is it within the power of a party. In the greater issues party divisions' cease to constitute the frontiers of a nation's policies, and while a factious few in high places may confuse the lines of demarcation of public opinion, the great force which that possesses knows little of party labels, and is exercised through every channel. And unless the bulk of public opinion is won over to a cause, that cause cannot be hammered through by any individual force. Teamwork invariably wins, and it was team-work that President Harding attempted to create, with laborious patience, and with results that are possibly more real than apparent.

There is one tribute which the world will pay unanimously and unreservedly to President Harding. He was a great and good man. He was not great, perhaps, in intellect, compared with some of the intellectual giants of his own country. But in the qualities which are of no less value, the qualities of heart, of temper, and of profound understanding of elemental things, he was undoubtedly great. His personal popularity was rivalled only by the extraordinary popularity of such a figure as that of Theodore Roosevelt. He held the goodwill even of those who have latterly complained bitterly of the failures of the Administration of which he was the Head. The special correspondent of the New York Times, reviewing the President's tour of the Middle-West, declared that while the people were somewhat cold to his speeches—attributable at least partly to his utilisation of the radio-amplifier and the consequent disembodying of the personal element—they were invariably cordial to the President himself. "The President scores in personal contact. He seems to have the ability to charm in intimate associations." His extemporaneous speeches to comparatively small groups aroused more enthusiasm and show of friendly feeling than his formal addresses to large audiences. An attractive personality was enhanced by an unusually handsome presence, and a face of warm kindness and good nature. It was enough to see the numerous photographs of the President in the American Press to realise that he was a very lovable man. And it was enough to read his speeches, lacking in simplicity and clarity even as they too often did, to see the sincerity and modesty of the man. The world is the poorer by his death. The British people will deplore his untimely end almost as deeply as Mr. Harding's countrymen, for he was a true friend, a sincere believer in Anglo-American co-operation, and, what is better still, a real man and a modest man whose heart responded to the nobler impulses. In him politics was sweetened and justified, at a time when it is the habit to look upon the politician and his profession as belonging to ignominy." In the sorrow which the American nation suffers at the tragic and untimely end of a most upright and well-intentioned man, all men, of every nationality and race, who prize the deeper moral qualities of mankind, will share.—P. & T. Times (British).

French Wireless—News And Views

(French Wireless)

Paris, Aug. 6.—Havas news agency learns that after the outrage committed by Raabe, the German student, by reason of the correct attitude of the German police General Simon, the Commander of the troops at Dusseldorff, set free the arrested superintendent of police.

It was in fact the German policemen who first rendered assistance to the wounded soldiers and ordered the Municipal ambulances-motorcars to carry away the victims to hospital.

The assault was unanimously condemned by the population and newspapers are condemning it in the most energetic manner.

The mayor of Dusseldorff; accompanied by his first assistant, came to state to General Denvignes, the delegate of the General Staff, that he condemned this odious crime and declared that he would make a similar declaration at the opening of the future meeting of the Municipal Council.

Paris, Aug. 6.—The duke d'Aoste, commander of the third Italian Army during the war, solemnly remitted on Sunday the Italian military cross to the city of Dixmude.

The Italian prince pinned the Italian military cross on the pillow at the coat of arms of the city near to the French military cross remitted in 1920 by President Poincare to the heroic city.

Production Of Gold In U. S. Is Falling

Gold production in the United States has dropped off 52 percent in the last seven years, according to H. N. Lawrie, Assistant to the recently appointed United States Senate Commission of Gold and Silver Inquiry. The commission plans to call a convention of the silver producers of the Americas at Reno, Nev., some time this Summer to discuss the organisation of a silver export association. Among the problems to be investigated are the causes of the continuing decrease in the production of gold and silver; the production, refining, transportation, marketing, sale and uses of gold and silver in the United States and elsewhere; the effect of the decreased production upon commerce, industry, exchange and prices. The members are authorised to confer with citizens, associations or corporations of foreign countries with a view to the stabilisation and wider use of silver in exchange and to propose to the President of the United States or the heads of the proper departments plans for negotiations with foreign Governments to the same end.

"From $101,000,000 worth of gold mined in 1915 the production has fallen to $49,000,000 in 1922," said Mr. Lawrie. "Silver production has fallen from 75,000,000 ounces mined in 1915 to 55,000,000 ounces in 1922. The crisis confronting the gold and silver mining industry is even more serious than that which confronted the agricultural industry when a Congressional commission was appointed to thoroughly investigate the condition of that industry. From this investigation remedial legislation resulted.

"A failure to restore normality to the gold and silver mining industry during the present crisis will be far-reaching in its effect upon the future prosperity of the nation, and it is the purpose of the commission to safeguard the public interest in that important field. Due to the decrease in the purchasing power of gold, which as the unit of the monetary system has a fixed price, and the rise in the operating costs, it has become unprofitable to operate any but the richer mines. It is estimated that 75 percent of the country's gold mines, in consequence, have shut down in the last few years. This represents a great loss to the country through the wastage of its gold ore resources. Once shut down, many mines cave in and fill with water and can only be reopened at great expense, if at all. The country cannot indefinitely hold its abnormally large monetary gold reserves and it should prevent the wastage of its gold ore resources."
